

You see random cuts of tape stuck on the screen in the shape of a heart through a linear polariser. Plastic molecules are elongated thus the tape exhibits birefringence properties. Ordinary and extraordinary rays may exit the plastic in or out of phase depending on wavelength and thickness resulting in a colourful image. Photo by Ivan Toftul.